$1,000 spent on recent ASI president race

By DAWN YOSHITAKE
Staff Writer

Financial statements of the three ASI presidential candidates showed a combined expense of more than $1,000 for the 1985 elections.

Each candidate had a maximum of $600 to spend for the ASI presidential position and the figure remained the same even though a run-off election was held.

Steve Dunton spent $575.37 for the presidential race, with $400 going towards signs and flyers.

"I spent most of the money before the run-off and I would have liked to have spent more," Dunton said.

He added, "Money may not help you win, but you can't win without it."

Dunton received $300 from his parents and another $300 from his grandparents to finance his campaign.

When Dunton decided to run for ASI president, he said he did not have enough time to solicit funds.

Even though the money he spent can't be recouped, Dunton said it was worth his efforts.

"I've been very active with student government. I felt I had to give it a shot. Otherwise, I'd wonder what if," said Dunton.

Mike Mendes, ASI president for 1985-86, spent $519 for his campaign.

"The money came out of my own pocket. I thought if I borrowed money, I didn't want to owe any favors. Economically it's difficult, but I feel better inside about it," he said.

Once elected, an ASI president is paid during their term in office.

Before the run-off election, Mendes said his expenses under $400. He added that more money was used for the second election.

Baker approves Add/Drop policy for Fall Quarter

By JULIA PRODIS
Staff Writer

After months of bureaucratic delays and pressure from students, President Warren Baker approved the two-week drop, two-week, one-day add period to be implemented Fall Quarter.

The announcement was made at the ASI Student Senate meeting Wednesday night, where senators also approved the ASI's $1.2 million dollar budget for 1985-86.

ASI President Kevin Creighton received a memorandum from Baker on Monday, April 29. A round of applause from the student senators followed Creighton's presentation of the news.

Also at the senate meeting, after two weeks of battles by ASI funded groups, wanting more money, the student senate made its final decisions on the 1985-86 budget.

The Children's Center received a $10,205 cut in their request of $40,000. The senators agreed with the ASI Finance Committee's recommendation regarding the Center.

The senators disagreed with the original recommendations of the Finance Committee on the following issues:

- The Multicultural Center received $300 from the ASI General-Insurance/Work Study fund for the rental of audio visual equipment.

- Recreation and Tournaments, a program that offers non-credit mini courses to students for a fee, received $1,107 for publicity purposes.

- Television Programming, a Program Board group, received $450 for publicity on their new Campus Network Service which will provide alternative satellite programs in Chumash auditorium.

It was also announced that Creighton will speak at commencement ceremonies. This decision came after a resolution was passed by the senate encouraging President Baker to overturn his decision not to allow the ASI President to speak at the ceremony.

The resolution, passed by the senate three weeks ago, stated that in order for the ASI President to speak at the ceremony, he must be a graduating senior to be a true representative of the graduating class. Creighton is a graduating senior.

Professor says white collar crime serious

By MARC MEREDYTH
Staff Writer

While public concern focuses on violence and street crimes, the head of the Cal Poly Social Sciences Department says white collar crime is the most serious problem facing America.

James Coleman, who recently had his book "The Criminal Elite: The Sociology of White Collar Crime" published, said that white collar crime costs the public more money than street crime and injures more innocent people.

In the book Coleman proposes ways to deal with white collar crime, which he defines as occupation-related, largely middle class crime. Coleman suggests changes in the financing of political campaigns, revision of the fines levied against offenders and a new system of auditing corporations.

Coleman said he spent about five years on the book and that it reflects his values and beliefs, how he would like to see the world change.

He said he's interested in why respectable people break the law. "It seems like they're well-off," Coleman said, "so why does a wealthy, respected businessman commit crime?" Being number one or beating the other guy is one explanation Coleman offered.

Another is the relative impunity of offenders. Coleman said for many white collar crimes the penalties are minor, especially in regard to corporate crime. The average fine for the largest corporations in America is about $1000.

Civil suits tend to be much more effective deterrents against corporate crime, Coleman said. But even they don't solve the problem. On the cases that reach civil court, like anti-trust suits, Coleman said the corporations simply outspend the government.

"After all," he explained, "you're dealing with the best lawyers in the world and large resources. Anti-trust suits take eight years on the average and by that time the charges are often dropped."

To limit corporate crime, Coleman said.

Cal Poly Greek Week continues

By KELLY MOORE
Staff Writer

With Poly Royal Weekend over and students cramming for midterm exams, it's time for some students to set aside those books and prepare for a week of fun-filled action and competitive spirit.

This week, of course, is Greek Week 1985, a week for students in the Greek system to compete against one another in various activities. The theme for Greek Week this year is "SLO Greeks Come Alive, Greek Week '85."

Competition began Monday night with the crowning of this year's Greek Goddess, Mary Beth DeVoy from Alpha Phi sorority. Volleyball competition has been going all week in Crandall Gym with the finals being held today. The women's triathlon will also be held today.

On Saturday there will be the men's wrestling matches in Crandall at 7 p.m. Sunday will mark the first day of Greek Week.

Bike Races will be at Cuesta College with the fraternities beginning at 8 a.m. and the sororities at 9 a.m. The car rally will begin at 11 a.m. in the library parking lot. In this event, members from the various houses drive their cars around town in search of various clues and are marked for their best time. Concluding this event will be a kick-off barbeque for all Greeks.

Monday will be Greek Amnesty day in which the houses may return any lost items or any items that may have been confiscated from other houses during the years. There will be no repercussions held against the house returning the item.

Tuesday will be Greek Week Shirt Day and Wednesday is Greek Sing. This is one of the major events of Greek Week in which members of each house performs a 10 minute skit on the 1985 theme of Greek Week. The skit includes songs, dances and parodies which display the talents of fellow students.

Swimming events are on Thursday beginning at 4:00 at the outdoor pool. This is also spirit day where you can see fellow Greeks displaying their spirit around the Cal Poly campus.

Tug of war competition will start at 3 p.m. at El Chorro Park on Friday with special events for both fraternities and sororities to follow in the evening.

Another major event of the week is Greek Olympiad. This begins at 8:30 a.m. at Port San Luis. This is where all major outdoor events will take place and also a lot of points will be given this day.

Sunday marks the end of Greek Week '85 with the tub race weigh-in at 7 a.m. on OH Hill. Awards and presentations will be made following this event where fraternity and sorority winners and the overall sweepstakes winners will be announced.

Cut guns, not financial aid

There comes a point when hearing about President Reagan's cuts to balance the federal budget that you want to stop listening.

Maybe it's because we've heard so much over the years about Reagan's effort to trim the "fat" from government social programs (and his gracious offer to reduce planned increases in the defense budget) that it's become old news.

But Cal Poly students shouldn't get tired of hearing about one Reagan budget cut that could affect them deeply: his proposal to cut financial aid for college students.

If Reagan's proposed budget (which would go into effect October 1986) went into effect today, between 30 and 35 percent of Cal Poly students receiving guaranteed student loans would be cut from the loan program.

That means 1,100 students — or about one of 16 people who attend Cal Poly — would no longer receive their loans. And that's at a university that provides a relatively cheap education, compared to expensive private schools where tuition can run up to $14,000 a year.

We realize that President Reagan should make every effort to reduce the federal deficit. In fact, it should be his biggest priority, because the economic health of this country depends on it.

But college students shouldn't have to pay such a heavy price. We'd like to see the defense budget, which Reagan shows a remarkable resistance to reduce, carefully scrutinized.

Cal Poly students have organized a letter campaign in an attempt to influence local congressmen, state senators and other officials to lobby in favor of financial aid.

The goal is to send 3,000 copies of the same letter, with room for personal comments, to five politicians: Senator Pete Wilson; U.S. representatives Leon Panetta, Bill Thomas and Bobbie Fiedler; and Gus Hopkins, chairman of the Committee on Education and Labor.

A booth set up at Poly Royal netted 1,500 signed letters. The remaining letters will be distributed to classes, but there are also letters in the ASI office in the University Union for students to sign if interested.

President Reagan isn't going to change his mind on financial aid cuts — it will take Congress to defeat his proposal.

By letting our legislators know we're concerned, Cal Poly students can have a hand in defeating a budget cut that should never take place.

Letters

Director adds to bowling issue

Editor:

I have proposed that the area occupied by the bowling lanes be evaluated for use as an interim Recreational Sports facility. I am not against bowling as a sport, nor do I see bowlers as inferior in any way to other enthusiasts. I am not putting bowling or bowlers down!

As the Executive Director of the University Union, I bring with me 18 years of professional experience in working with union facilities and students. I see as my responsibility the ongoing evaluation of the facility and program. I gave, and will continue, to evaluate performance and recommend action to appropriate governing boards. Students on these boards actively involved themselves in weighing each recommendation carefully. Decisions are a result of a political process, we have a political process that insures participation by all impacted groups and consumers. To claim that a board such as the University Union Advisory Board (UUAB) as ineffectual is a "cop-out" for not getting involved in a process that insures equal footing for all elements in the campus community. Four weeks ago, I recommended the phase out of bowling after several months of research; the UUAB and Union Executive Committee (UEC) will be making their own evaluation and making their final decision sometime in May.

Contrary to your headline (Feb. 28), students do want recreational facilities; some 9,000 students are currently involved in Rec Sports and Intramurals. There is an acute shortage of facilities and resources on campus. Student needs and preferences are documented in the Morales and Rossetto study and by data collected by the Rec Sports program staff. What is in question is how to pay for it and how much it should cost. It is very important that the need not be overshadowed by other issues. Trends are merely an inference, but national trends are consistent with our campus experience and other institutions are attempting to solve the same problems. Cal Berkeley, Davis and UCLA have all just built new facilities. California State Universities such as San Jose, Long Beach, San Diego and a few others are planning similar facilities. The experience of those institutions opening new facilities is that there is a very heavy demand on the facility almost immediately.

I believe that the task of meeting these needs will eventually fall on the University Union when the Forward Committee completes its charge. The newly published Standards for College Unions adopted by the Council for the Advancement of Standards for Student Services/Development Programs (Sept. 1984) state, "The primary goals of the Union must be to maintain facilities, provide services and promote programs that are responsive to student developmental needs and to physical, social, recreation, and continuing educational needs of the campus community." The only mechanism in the California State University System to fund facilities of this type is through the University Union fees.

In the dynamic community that makes up a university, trends change as do tastes and interests. Bowling was very popular some 20 years ago and was included in many unions throughout the country. Declining demand has warranted the reallocation of that space in many unions. Here at Cal Poly league activity is at 60 percent of its 1980-81 level; bowling classes are about 50 percent. Revenue has declined each year in spite of lower than market rates for bowling; sales at midyear were at 16 percent instead of 50 percent. Bowlers vote for the retention of bowling every time they play, not just by petition or rhetoric. At a cost of $26,000, not including space, utilities, etc., I believe students should evaluate bowling in light of other more

I will be recommending other changes that will impact other special interest groups. My intent is not to insult them, but rather to point out the economic or program impact of those enterprises. Increasing student fees and retaining programs because "we have always done it that way" makes no sense to me. I believe that positive change with broad based student involvement is exciting and in some areas of the University Union, long overdue!

Roger Conway
Executive Director

Note: Since Roger Conway's letter dated last month, he has contributed more information to the bowling alley issue. "Retaining bowling for 1986 will cost $39,000, eliminating the program will generate $18,000 and the net cost to students for one year is $57,000. Renovations to create a Rec Sports temporary facility will cost about the same (est. $174,000) as bowling's overhaul and will be operated by Rec Sports."

Student charged with theft of $700 bike

By DAN RUTHEMEYER
Staff Writer

A Cal Poly student was charged Monday with grand theft and possession of stolen property.

Federico Leoncio, 20, was charged with the two crimes for the theft of a bicycle, said Ray Berrett of the Public Safety Department.

Valued at $700 by the owner, the stolen bicycle was discovered April 9 in Leoncio's dorm room by the Cal Poly Police. Although no arrest was made, the details of the incident were sent to the San Luis Obispo District Attorney.

"We didn't arrest him because we didn't feel he was going anywhere," said Wayne Carmack of the Public Safety Department. "Because he was a student we didn't want him to have to miss classes."

The police had gone to Leoncio's room to question him concerning the theft of another bicycle which a student had said he had bought from Leoncio, said Carmack.

When the police arrived at Leoncio's room and he wasn't there, they took possession of the $700 bicycle, said Carmack.

"We saw the other bike which looked suspicious and we brought it in," he said.

Leoncio later admitted to stealing the $700 bicycle, but said that he had bought the first one from another person with the knowledge that it was stolen, said Carmack. The police are trying to locate this other person, but they admit that chances of finding him are not that good.

"I don't have much hope in finding him because we don't have a name, but only a description and a nickname," said Carmack.

Leoncio will be arraigned June 3 in San Luis Obispo Municipal Court.

Poly hosts high school FFA contest

By LYNETTE FREDIANI
Staff Writer

High school Future Farmers of America members throughout California will compete in 19 different contests Saturday at Cal Poly as part of the FFA State Finals.

More than 1,600 FFA members are expected to participate in events ranging from dairy, dairy cattle, floriculture and livestock judging to farm power, small engines and land judging competitions.

Public speaking and parliamentary procedure competitions will be conducted during the State FFA Convention which commences Sunday morning.

Agricultural Science major Greg Beard is the student chairman of the state finals competition. Beard is a former FFA member and was appointed chairman of the event by Dean Lark Carter of the School of Agriculture.

"More than 200 high school campuses will be represented at the state finals," said Beard.

Beard said that 500-Cal Poly students, most in agriculture majors or former FFA members, are involved in the preparation and execution of the state finals competition.

because most of the signs and flyers had been taken down after the first one.

Changes in election requirements Mendes said he would like to see are reducing the areas where signs can be posted. He explained the administration complained about the amount of litter caused by the signs.

John Carroll spent $88.65 for his campaign and said the money came from both he and his parents.

Carroll said he did not have the money to spend on a large campaign and added that he doubted his chances of winning whether he had more money or not.

"I didn't think I'd win if I had had it (money) but it does have an effect," said Carroll.

Most of the money was spent on media, rather than flyers and signs because the media reaches more people and everyone had posters, said Carroll.

eman said it will be necessary to increase funding for government regulatory and enforcement agencies so that they can begin to match the skilled legal staffs and greater financial resources of the corporations.

He also said that employees of regulatory agencies should be required to sign an agreement, backed by legal penalties, promising never to work for any of the firms that fall under their regulatory jurisdiction.

Fines are something Coleman believes could be effective in preventing white collar crime if they are stiff enough to make getting caught undesirable. Coleman says that the laws could be rewritten to require that convicted offenders pay a penalty at least equal to the amount of profit they made from their crimes.

Coleman said the book was written mainly from library research, taking scattered and disorganized research and pulling it all together. He said he's still working now on white collar crime, writing a paper for sociological journals.

A member of the Cal Poly faculty since 1973, Coleman earned an undergraduate degree in sociology from California State University, Northridge, and two advanced degrees in sociology from the University of California, Santa Barbara.

Keeping faith

Last in a series

By SUSAN EDMONDSON
and SUSAN A. ELLIOTT

Staff Writers

With more than 30 religious groups on the Cal Poly campus — ranging from several Christian, Muslim to Jewish groups — students have many opportunities to express their faith.

This article is the second in a series examining trends in religion and the different approaches of the religious groups on campus. Leaders from six organizations discussed student attitudes and commitments to their faiths.

Studies in the Old and New Testament

"More Christians seem to be coming out of the closet," said student leader Jeff Lehmkuhl of the Christian group Studies in the Old and New Testament. "There seems to be much more Christian activity on campus lately."

Lehmkuhl said the whole purpose of the group is to exalt Christ and to change people's lives.

"If people's lives aren't changed, then we're wasting our time," he said.

He said Studies in the Old and New Testament is different from other groups since it offers a consistent weekly Bible study. Many other groups study books and themes, watch films and hear speakers, but Lehmkuhl said the primary emphasis of this group is to focus on the Bible in a large study group setting.

While many Cal Poly students party on Friday nights, this Christian group chose Friday evenings to hold their weekly Bible studies and about 50 people attend. Studies in the Old and New Testament is a relatively new group on campus that started three years ago.

Lehmkuhl said the group definitely has a spiritual emphasis over a social emphasis.

"But it's a whole life-style," he said, "and fellowship with other Christian students on a social level is certainly part of that."

Bahai

The Bahai faith, an Eastern religion that consists of a belief in oneness of all religions and harmony with science and religion, is represented on the Cal Poly campus by a small group of about six people.

"We don't believe there is only one way to Heaven," student leader Craig Nelson said. "Instead we accept all religions that seek an independent investigation of the truth of the glory of God."

He said that while most religions teach the same eternal principles, it is just the laws and customs of these religions that differ.

"As man changes, so do the customs," he said. "Therefore, we seek a more global emphasis."

He said a lot of students seem serious about their religious beliefs but that many get too caught up in pursuing career matters over spiritual matters.

Since the stress of the Bahai group is to seek an independent investigation of the truth, Nelson said the group has more an intellectual appeal to students than an emotional appeal.

Pilgrim Bible Study

"Cal Poly has about the best opportunities for students to get involved in Christian activities than most other campuses," said Joe Glass, faculty adviser to the Pilgrim Bible Study group.

About 40 students participate in the Pilgrim group to study the Bible. He said the difference between this group and other Christian groups is the way they interpret the Bible. Glass said the Pilgrims look to more a symbolic treatment in interpreting scriptures. He said an example is their view that the 1000 year tribulation mentioned in the Bible can be looked at as a symbolic time frame instead of a fixed time period of 1,000 years.

Glass said one main trend he has noted in the past 15 years is that students' awe and respect for the Word of God doesn't seem to be as strong as it used to be.

Glass said the Pilgrim group seeks a spiritual group emphasis but that social activities are important as well.

Navigators

"I find because we're interdenominational that's our strength, because you have the variety and differences of thinking," said Jo Ann Ray, women's representative for Navigators.

Ray has been with the Cal Poly chapter of Navigators for four years. She described the three goals of the group as students being willing to study the Bible, then share what they study with others, and memorize what the Bible says.

"I think we meet a lot of religious-oriented people or people that are really interested in spiritual growth," Ray said. "Our focus is to try and contact the student who doesn't have a church background," Ray said. Navigators contacts students through a two-fold plan of evangelism and follow-up.

The membership of Navigators fluctuates, she said, starting small in the fall and then growing throughout the school year.

Ray was involved with a Navigators group at the University of Colorado in Boulder in the 1960s. She said she has noticed some changes in student attitudes toward religion since she came to Cal Poly.

"Our (Navigator's) outreach is less — meaning, we can have people in terms of number but in terms of wanting to do Bible study is less," Ray added, though, that the level of interest in spiritual thinking among students has probably increased.

"I think there is less of a willingness to be committed to something like a Bible study or to a regular activity," she said. "Peer pressure is very high so if their friends are doing it then they're happy to do it."

Ray said the individualism of students at Cal Poly impressed her. "I enjoy just talking to students on campus. Ray added that the atmosphere at Cal Poly makes it easier to talk to students about religion."

Haverim

Haverim, the Jewish cultural exchange group at Cal Poly, has been on campus since 1959. Advisor Stuart Goldenburg said membership has remained at about 50 students in the past few years.

"It goes up and down. It's fairly stable though. This year it's a little higher than it's been, partly because I think the president has been very active."

This quarter Haverim organized special events for recognition of the independence of Israel and observance of the Holocaust. "They try and tie their events into social and cultural or religious issues," Goldenburg said.

He said Cal Poly lacks an open atmosphere for different religions. "Some of the people have probably never met a Jewish person in their life and they have stereotypes of what a Jewish person is like and they cause a lot of culture shock."

"People say things and do things that they don't necessarily know or understand," Goldenburg stressed tolerance and education to help people understand the Jewish faith.

Goldenburg added, "I don't think there's any big barriers for people that are willing to let people believe in what they want to believe in... which is the majority of people."

Goldenburg said President Reagan's visit to a cemetery in Bitburg, West Germany where S.S. soldiers are buried is symbolic of other people's ignorance of the Jewish faith. "In terms of anti-Semitism, people are forgetting what happened in the Holocaust already. We have a President in this country that's just as bad, maybe worse. His attitude was let's forget the past. I don't think he's smart enough to be aware of what he's doing."

Campus Crusade for Christ

Campus Crusade for Christ has been on the Cal Poly campus since 1965. Campus Director Mike Nyfeller has worked full-time with the group for eight years.

Campus Crusade has a membership of about 225 students. "It's been growing," Nyfeller said. "People are seeing a need in their life."

He said students join groups such as Campus Crusade because they want a group of people with similar backgrounds and beliefs and they are searching for meaning or purpose in their lives.

Nyfeller said he saw little difference between the Christian groups on campus. "What sets us (Campus Crusade) apart a little bit more is our different varieties of activities. Some of the other interdenominational groups don't diversify perhaps as much as we do."

He said although statistics may indicate that nationally students are more involved in religion, he has not noticed much of a change in the membership of Campus Crusade. The group has a particularly strong following in the Greek community, he added.

Nyfeller said he has observed more openness at Cal Poly than at some other campuses. "The history of Cal Poly has been good about having open forums for discussion."

CiCi Barbe has won 76 percent of her matches playing in the No. 6 singles spot.

STEPHANIE PINGEL/Mustang Daily

Tennis player is national qualifier

Poly netter does well in tourney; doubles team could also qualify

BY JANET HASEROT

Staff Writer

Last week a member of the Cal Poly women's tennis team made it to the fourth round of the Ojai Tennis Tournament.

Sally Russell, who will also compete in the nationals, made it to the fourth round before finally losing to Linda Oeschle of Cal Berkeley 1-6, 0-6.

Russell opened with a 7-5, 6-2 win over Lathy Brodrick of University of Nevada, Reno.

She then received two defaults when her opponents, Missy Conn from Cal State Northridge and Melanie Steder from USC failed to show.

"It is always a good experience to play at the Ojai Tournament," said coach Orion Yeast. "All the tough schools are in our draw which allows the players to play against an experienced Division I player."

"It always brings out the best in ones game, playing such talented players."

Kim McCracken dropped a first-round match to Christy Bragg of Long Beach State 6-0, 6-0, but then teamed with Laurie Magin for a win in doubles over a team from Cal State San Bernardino 6-0, 6-1.

The Mustang pair then lost to Russo and Smaller from University of Arizona 0-6, 4-6.

Sally Russell, with an overall record of 11-8, will advance to nationals in singles.

The doubles pair of Magin and McCracken are waiting for a decision from the Regional Committee on a possible bid to nationals.

"Our schedule was much tougher this year and our conference was much stronger as well," said Yeast. "My recruiting looks solid for next year so I feel we can be in the top of the California Collegiate Athletic Association (CCAA) next year as well."

The 8-4 Mustangs is third in the California Collegiate Athletic Associations. The women have an 15-6 overall record.

CiCi Barbe has taken 76 percent of her matches and has the best winning percentage of the Cal Poly single players.

Wendy Elliot, Regina Frawley and Kristina Vitols have all won more than 70 percent of their matches.

Racquetball tourney slated for weekend

An over-the-line softball tournament held during Poly Royal was successful, said the coordinator of Rec Sports special events.

Eighteen teams participated in the Friday tournament, said Coordinator Dianna Cozzi. The winning team was Traci Peterson, Dave Berry, and Paul McGovern.

A doubles racquetball tournament is planned for Saturday.

said Cozzi.

There will be men's, women's and mixed doubles divisions.

The tournament begins at 9 a.m. on the Cal Poly racquetball courts.

Cozzi said students, faculty and staff can participate.

For any more information or to sign up, contact the Rec Sports office in University Union 119 or call 546-1366.
